The RETC aims to strengthen the capacity of the forest sector in member countries through advanced training and education programs. The RETC is a comprehensive facility for education and training, meetings, accommodation, and convenience services. The center was built under the AFoCO Landmark Program and has been operational since July 2018.

The core training topics of the center are (i) Forest Rehabilitation and Reforestation which covers seed harvesting, seed storage and supply, nursery management, tree plantation; (ii) Forest Fire Management which taps on fire safety and behavior, fire prevention, fire inspection, fire information system and fire suppression; and (iii) Community Based Forest Management which enhances socio-economic analysis, forest assessment, monitoring, forest resources, forest-related enterprise development. Since its grand opening in July 2018, the RETC held 43 training courses for more than 5,000 participants, including 26 community development courses.

The Meeting will provide guidance on how to develop sustainable capacity development and make most out of the RETC so that all members benefit through RETC.

Guiding Questions

What should be the strategic direction for developing the right capacities for sustainable development of the region, including opportunities for the RETC?

What are the areas of capacity development needed in the Member countries in addition to the courses provided or planned?

How would you foresee the RETC as a flagship institution shaping up in the region?

d. AFoCO membership, the way forward

The ASEAN-ROK Forest Cooperation was formalized in 2012 comprising 10 ASEAN Member States and the ROK with ROK's proposal as an initial phase of the current Asian Forest Cooperation Organization. Under this cooperation mechanism, various regional forestry activities and projects were implemented. Currently, 12 countries are Parties to the AFoCO and some of the ASEAN Member States are yet to join.

As part of the next step on expansion and building a strong foundation of membership, it is important to envisage the full participation of the ASEAN Member States as it was a part of the initial phase of ASEAN-ROK Forest Cooperation. The participation of all ASEAN Member States will strengthen the capacity and the role of the Organization in the region and help to collaborate with the global target in the forest sector.

Noting that the 1st Session of the Assembly has expressed no objection to the participation of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) to AFoCO, the Meeting will consider involving more countries in the region. With stronger stewardship and wider network, the Organization can support to materialize the vision of a greener Asia.

What is the vision we want to share with potential member countries in the region?

How can we strengthen the required capacities or aspects when considering expansion of membership including financial resources?
